HISTORICAL SOCIETY'S ANNUAL

Interesting Reports and Discussion at Meeting in Society Rooms on Main Street. Officers Elected and Refreshments Served.

The Annual meeting of the Andover Historical society was held last Monday evening in the society rooms on Main street with Dr. C. E. Abbott presiding.

The report of the secretary read by Miss Helen Eaton for Mrs. Annie T. Flagg, gave an account of the year's work and told of the addition of twenty-two new members, making a total of two hundred. The treasurer's report, given by George Abbot showed an increase of more than $125.00 in the net receipts for the year as well as an accumulation of invested funds.

The librarian, John V. Holt, told of the numerous gifts received by the society during the year among which are a powder horn marked M. A. formerly belonging to Moses Abbot who started on August 15, 1757 to the relief of Fort William Henry, presented by Judge George H. Poor and a trombone, used in the South church, and presented by Mrs. T. J. Farmer. He also reported that the autograph poem "Manhood" written by Dr. S. F. Smith for John F. Moore on the occasion of his marriage, and presented to the Society a year ago,

Better Speech Week

Special lessons and the distribution of fliers which emphasized better speech as one of the duties of citizenship have marked the observance of Better Speech week in the Andover public schools.

On Thursday morning the fifty pupils in the A division of Grade VII, under the direction of their teacher, Miss Etta M. Dodge, entertained their schoolmates with an original play prepared as fitting conclusion to the exercises of the week. After an introductory dialogue by groups of boys and girls, Lucy Sanborn, impersonating Columbia, appealed to her hearers as good Americans to use better English, setting an example to aliens and helping on Americanization and finer citizenship. The play proved both entertaining and instructive.

Fotoplayer at Colonial Theatre

A fotoplayer, made by the American Fotoplayer Co., of California, one of the most up-to-date instruments for describing motion pictures with appropriate music, is being installed at the Colonial theatre on Essex street by the proprietor, Samuel Resnik.

The instrument, which contains a piano, a reed organ and organ pipes for orchestral effect arrived in town last week and workmen have been busily engaged in its installation which is almost complete except for the electrical connections. Mr. Resnik regrets the delay, but measures are being taken to have the necessary adjustments made so that his patrons may enjoy the music at an early date.

The fotoplayer is placed directly in front of the stage, but will not extend above its level, as a special pit is constructed below the floor, which will allow the installation of the instrument without obstructing the view of the pictures.

Miss Margaret Davis of Lawrence, who has had considerable experience as a musician, has been secured as the player.

The specifications of the instrument are as follows: Length, 17 ft., 4 in.; depth, 3 ft. 9 in.; height, 5 ft. There is a high-grade player piano and the instrument may also be operated manually. The three stops of the pressure reed organ are diapason 8 ft.; principal 8 ft.; clarinet, 16 ft.; also tremolo and piano muffler.

The pipes for orchestral effects are: Treble, vox mystica, corbet or quintadina, flute, flute d'amour, viol d' orchestra.

Bass: viol d'orchestra, violeela, dulciana or quintaton; reed organ and pipes, 65-note range.

The traps and effects include: Set of orchestra bells (31); xylophone, bass drum, pistol shots, cymbal, tom-tom, thunder, snare drum, doorbell or telephone bell, bird whistle, Chinese wood drum, triangle, fire gong, cathedral chime, tambourine castanets, horses' hoofs, klaxon, sleigh bells, etc.

The cases are of quarter-sawed oak beautifully finished with a suitable bench. The lower part is equipped with a motor of sufficient capacity and the instrument is equipped with electric light over the double tracker.

ANDOVER CASTS BIG VOTE

Ninety-one Per Cent of Total Registration Cast Ballots on Tuesday. As Usual Heavily Republican. Town Stays in "Dry" Column.

As was expected, Andover voters, men and women, came out in force on Tuesday and cast their ballots in the great political fight that was being waged all over the country, and as was also expected the result showed that they were strongly Republican, the votes of the leading Republican office-seekers at least, being in most cases about five times greater than those of their Democratic opponents. In all there were 3163 ballots cast, of these 2808 being in Precinct 1 and 355 in Precinct 2. There were 13 absent voters; 7 men and 6 women. From the figures of Precinct 1 it can be seen that the officials had much work to do to take care of all these voters and that there was, at no time, any confusion peaks well for the ability in this their first experience with such a large attendance. It is said on good authority that this was the largest single precinct in Massachusetts and plans are now under way to have the town divided into smaller districts.

The polls opened at six o'clock promptly and at that hour there were many in line waiting to cast their ballots. To Mr. and Mrs. E. Kendall Jenkins, two of the oldest residents of the town came the honor of depositing the

ROLL CALL SUPPER

Members of Baptist Church Enjoy Fine Supper Followed by Entertainment and Roll Call, 97 Members Being Present

The annual Roll Call celebration of the Baptist church was held on Wednesday evening, November 3. Supper, — oh, such a supper, — was served to about a hundred persons. Tables almost groaned with delicacies, and blossomed out with many bouquets of outdoor flowers. Cyrus Brown offered thanksgiving before the feast of good things, which was also a time of warm, sweet fellowship.

After a short business meeting, the roll was called, the hearty thank offering being received as the people responded. Scripture verses were given, and interesting letters read from absentees.

A beautiful solo, "I come to Thee, O Lord," was rendered by Miss Elaine Wetterburg, accompanied by Mr. Kelley, church organist.

The roll call gave a remarkable showing of responses from 97 members.

TREMONT

Lenore Ulric in "The Son-Daughter" now in her third week of the engagement at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, is meeting with the grestest success of her career.

The "Son-Daughter" is a play of New China by George Scarborough and David Belasco and no expense has been spared in casting the piece or giving it adequate stage embellishments. It bears the Belasco stamp and this fact gives it the Broadway prestige that insures metropolitan favor in every sense of the word. One cannot possibly go wrong seeing "The Son-Daughter."

The play is breaking all records at the Tremont Theatre, Boston for business and there is a big demand already indicated for seats far in advance evidently owing to the limited engagement allowed at that theatre. All mail orders from out of town are receiving prompt and careful attention.

Miss Ulric's popularity in this superb play is every bit as pronounced as it was during her engagements in "Tiger Rose" two seasons ago and she is rapidly scoring a notable personal triumph. Taking the play in general it is a success of remarkable proportions.

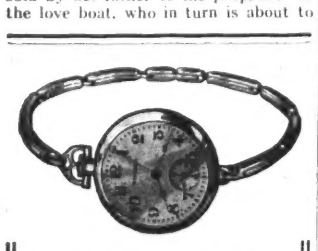

SHUBERT

William Harris, Jr.'s production "East is West", with Fay Bainter, the firs and lea of the "interesting Eastern" plays that have acquired sudden popularity with American audiences, is now in the third month of its successful engagement at the Sam S. Shubert Theatre Boston, where it has been playing to capacity and fascinated audiences nightly. Its producers have staged something so entirely different from the usual run of plays that the production is proving to be, by far, the most unusual and the most charming play which has been seen in Boston for many seasons, and bids fair to repeat there the record-breaking success of the New York engagement, where it recently completed a run of two consecutive seasons at the Astor Theatre, lasting through the summer months without a break and playing to enormous audiences at every performance.

"East is West" is a comedy in three acts and a prologue, written by Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer, and is staged partly in China and partly in San Francisco. The prologue shows a "Love Boat" on the Yangtse River, China, where the daughters, the most undesirable of Chinese possessions, are sold to the highest bidder. To this boat is dragged Ming Toy, a pretty little Chinese girl, who, much against her will, is sold by her father to the proprietor of the love boat, who in turn is about to sell her to a disagreeable old Chinaman by the name of Chang Lee. Fortunately for Ming Toy, the son of the American Ambassador to China, Billy Benson, moved by pity, prevails on Lo Sang Kee, a prosperous Chinese merchant of San Francisco, to buy her and transport her to his American home.

The play is full of interest from start to finish and is worked out in a masterly manner, everything, of course, coming out right in the end.

There are the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees, and seats are selling two weeks in advance. All mail orders will be given careful and prompt attention.

Training School Reds Lead

The end of the third week of the Sixth Essex County Egg Laying Contest finds Pen 24, R. I. Reds, owned by the Essex County Training School Lawrence, Mass., leading the contest with a total of 135 eggs. Pen 8, White Wyandottes, owned by Wm. C. Peck, Storrs, Conn., are very close to the leaders, having a total of 130 eggs. Pen 8 laid fifty eggs the third week while Pen 24 laid but forty-six eggs. Next week the race will be even closer with Reds, Rocks and Wyandottes all in the running for first place.

The excellent weather has been very favorable to the conditioning and proper development of the pullets and they have responded by increasing their average egg production to 30.6 per cent during the third week. In other contests we find that this per cent has not been reached until the middle of January. If possible we will attempt to hold the production from climbing too rapidly by slightly increasing the amount of scratch grain fed. High flock averages in the fall often lead to a partial molt in the winter with an accompanying drop in egg production.

Punchard 2—Pinkerton 14

Pinkerton Academy of Derry, N. H. won from Punchard 14-2 when their football teams met in their annual game on the local playstead last Saturday afternoon.

Punchard was without the services of Captain Carter who is still suffering from a strained knee and was further weakened during the game by the loss of Dyer who was disqualified. Dyer objected to the manner in which he was tackled by a Pinkerton player and was sent to the sidelines by the referee. At the time Punchard led 2-0 having scored on a safety when a Pinkerton back was tackled behind his goal line.

With Dyer out Pinkerton found little trouble in scoring and made two touchdowns, chiefly through the successful use of the forward pass, and line drives at the left side of Punchard's line.

The annual game with Exeter will be played next Saturday afternoon.

Harvard 17—P. A. 7

The Harvard Yearlings sprung a surprise on Andover Saturday on Brothers' Field and although the Blue scored a touchdown in the first few minutes of play, Harvard went one better before the game was half over and before Andover was able to effectively smear Harvard's line plunging. The first half ended with Harvard Fresh leading 14 to 7, and the only scoring in the second half was done by Lee of Harvard. The Crimson was unable to advance and the quarterback kicked a field goal from the 25-yd. line near the end of the fourth period, making the final count, Harvard Fresh 17, Andover 7.

Andover was weakened by the absence of Veghte and Capt. Wingate both of whom are on the injured list. Near the end of the game Mahrt went out with an injured knee and Wolfe was also added to the cripples, when in tackling Gherke he badly twisted his ankle and had to be carried off the field.

Harvard played a rough game and did not escape penalties but all, except one, were for offside playing or holding. Leo Daley at tackle played one of the best games of his career and it was his work that stopped Harvard's ground-gaining play. Wolfe up to the time of his accident also starred, but Mahrt did not show up so well and fumbled badly.

ANNUAL MEETING HELD

had been suitably framed. The society has recently been offered an interesting old pipe-organ but because of the limited space, it may not be possible to accept the gift.

The subject of a pageant or other fitting celebration in observance of the 275th anniversary of the founding of the town was introduced by the president but no definite action was taken.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

Dr. Charles E. Abbott, president; Mrs. Matthew S. McCurdy, Nathaniel E. Bartlett, vice presidents; George Abbot, treasurer; Miss Helen Eaton, secretary; directors, Miss Agnes Park, Miee Bell J. Butterfield, William A. Trow, Philip F. Ripley and Omar P. Chase; custodian, John V. Holt. Miss Ella Holt was named chairman of the house committee with power to appoint her associates.

A quartet dressed in old-fashioned costume, consisting of Mrs. F. G. Moore, Mrs. David Shaw, Frank L. Brigham and Eugene M. Weeks and accompanied by Miss Frances Morgan, violinist, sang two old-time songs, "Long, Long Ago" and "Love's Old Sweet Song."

Dr. C. E. Abbot read a paper entitled "Leaves from the Book of Time" the inspiration for which he drew largely from the "North American Almanack and Gentleman's and Lady's Diary published in 1776 by Samuel Stearns a student of Physick and Astronomy."

The old almanacs filled a larger place with the reading public before books were so numerous, and beside the usual calendar of the days and months the southing and setting of the stars and moon, they prophecied the weather, gave information about history, stage routes and the convening of courts as well as containing sage maxims for the successful conduct of the reader's affairs.

Although Dr. Abbott made no claim to originality in his paper, there were many references to items of local interest which made it of value as a resume of old-time history.

Refreshments of coffee and cakes were served by Miss Ella Holt, Mrs. Frank Foster, Mrs. John Franklin, Mrs. Frederic N. Chandler and Mrs. Fred E. Batcheller.

O'Connell Wins Monthly Match

In a sensational finish John O'Connell of Wolcott avenue won the monthly medal match, next in importance to the club championship, from L. W. Irwin, Tuesday afternoon in a 36-hole match, three up and two to play, at the Country Club in Lawrence. O'Connell was three down at the 27th hole, having found the handicap of 13 strokes or at the rate of 26 in 36 holes insurmountable. Starting at the first of the last nine, however, O'Connell by playing par golf won five holes in succession, halved the long sixth and won the seventh and the match by three and two.

At the finish O'Connell was one over par for seven holes. As a result of the match the winner received at the Golfers' dinner Wednesday night the prize for the event given annually by Maurice J. Curran of Andover. To gain the prize the winner had to eliminate four fellow golfers during the past few weeks. Irwin, the runner-up, played a remarkably steady game, considering that this is his first year. He drives a very long ball and in his final match his short game was steady.

Andover-Exeter

On Saturday afternoon, November 14, Andover and Exeter, the two great preparatory-school rivals will meet in the annual football game on Brothers Field. Special preparations are being made to handle the largest crowd that has ever witnessed one of these notable contests, the sale of tickets promising at this early date, an attendance of nearly 10,000 people.

Interest in these games brings together many of the old graduates of both schools as well as people of this and surrounding towns, and what is learned of the merits of both teams leads the writer to believe that the crowd will be treated to an exceedingly interesting game of football.

The preliminary season of both teams has shown that there are good men to be reckoned with on either squad, but from a close study of the lineup it would seem that Andover has the greatest amount of first-team material on hand. Many upsets have been noted, however, in these contests and the best team has not always come out on top.

The records of the teams this year seem to give Andover a little the better of the bargain. This can be attributed in a large degree to excellent individual work of three or four stars that Coach Daly has developed. Probably the most brilliant player, however, Herbert Ellis a half-back of Eddie Mahan's type will be out of the game owing to his failure to keep up his studies and he will be sadly missed. He has played a wonderful game for the Blue all year and his admirers hoped to see him do much in the big game. There is still some excellent material to draw from and no doubt doubt with Mahrt, Tillson, Kohler, and Deignan the back-field positions will be ably filled. In Captain Wingate, Andover has one of the best quarter-backs that has ever worn the blue. He is a wonderful field general, a fine runner with the ball and his tackling is sure. This position is one of the strongest on the team. For the line, Veghte, centre, Daly and Reed tackles, and Wolfe at end make a combination hard to beat and their playing should be watched. It is not at all unlikely that Coach Daly will make some shifts owing to Ellis' enforced absence from the line-up and some new stars might be brought to light. Only a week remains however, before the whistle blows and radical changes will undoubtedly work havoc with a well-drilled machine.

The Exeter team, from a poor start at the beginning of the season has rounded out to a worthy opponent. Their games have been well played and although beaten in the majority of games they have kept the opponents' scores down and have showed marked improvement in form as the season progressed. Injuries in the last few games have lessened their chances of winning from Andover and if the injured men do not come around in a week they will undoubtedly be badly handicapped. Van Lengen and Lindell are both on the hospital list and it is doubtful if either gets into the game.

Tomorrow afternoon the Andover team goes to Worcester for the last game prior to the Exeter contest and the result will be well worth watching as the Exeter team lost to this school in the game last Saturday by only one point.

Union Service at South Church

It is an official statement, not a surmise, that no fewer than 266,000 officers and men are required to man the more than 30,000 documented vessels of the American Merchant Marine of 15,325,000 tons. This is an increase of about 80,000 officers and men within four years, a gain which has been entirely in open ocean service. It is estimated that fully 175,000 officers and men are now afloat on American sea-going ships, the latter including sailors, firemen, stewards, etc.

The above figures from "The Marine Journal" are interesting ones. When one considers the experiences, hardships and dangers in the lives of these men, an almost limitless field is opened for making their surroundings more cheerful and comfortable, their monotonous days brighter, their physical discomforts less, and their recreation more pleasant and profitable ,more safe and sane.

The manner in which work of this kind is being done in Boston by the Boston Seaman's Friend Society, will be related at the South Church next Sunday evening, when Rev. Merritt A. Farren, secretary of that society, will give an illustrated lecture at a union service of the Free, West and South churches Mr. Farren has come in contact with many types of sailors, and can relate some very interesting experiences with these men of the sea.

The service, which will be held under the auspices of the King's Daughters, will begin at 7.30 o'clock, and a cordial invitation to the public is extended. In addition to the lecture, there will be special music by the quartet of the South church. An offering will also be made, which will be given to the Seaman's Friend Society.

East, West, Home's Best

It has been said that The Youth's Companion has had more readers per copy than any other publication in America. There is good reason to believe this to be true. But the important thing is that the influence of the paper upon its millions of readers has always been directed to building character. "East, west, home's best," has been its unuttered slogan. In its articles, editorial and otherwise, it has dwelt upon the importance of good citizenship. In all its contents it has aimed to give not only entertainment, but "steppings ones to higher things."

A year of The Youth's Companion brings a tremendous tide of delightful and diversified reading that cannot be found elsewhere.

The fifty-two issues of 1921 will be crowded with serial stories, short stories, editorials, poetry, facts and fun. Subscribe now and receive:

1. The Youth's Companion—52 issues in 1921.
2. All the remaining issues of 1920.
3. The Companion Home Calendar for 1921. All the above for $2.50.

Close Egg Laying Contest

Essex County Training School, Lawrence, Mass., wins the Fifth Egg Laying Contest at the Essex County Agricultural School at Hathorne, Mass.

A pen of Rhode Island Red hens, in a contest of thirty-four pens, won at Hathorne which closed Friday, October 29th, in one of the closest and most interesting finishes ever known in a race of this kind, by a total egg production of 1796. The Training School pen of Reds No. 31, led the contest the first eight weeks when they met with a severe set-back by sickness and dropped to tenth place. Applecrest White Rocks then leading by 205 eggs.

Early in the spring of 1920 they began to climb and by heavy consistent laying passed all pens by September excepting the Applecrest White Rocks, pen No. 14, from Hampton Falls, N. H. This pen of Rocks at the beginning of the last week of the contest still held a lead of three eggs.

The Reds did not overcome this margin until Thursday when they led by two eggs. At noon Friday, the last day, Applecrest was leading by one egg but in the afternoon the Reds came back and won at the close of a twelve months' contest by one egg.

This pen of Rhode Island Red hens showed a marked superiority over all other pens as they made the highest weekly record of sixty-two eggs and the highest monthly record of 224 eggs which was made during the entire contest. They also won four blue ribbons for highest monthly production, twice as many as any other pen.

These hens were bred, hatched and raised at the Training School from the regular stock and in the same manner as the hens kept for home egg production. They did not have the free range advocated by many.

Serum that Saved Life Made from Sheep's Blood

The serum that saved the life of Lena Delbane, after the other six members of her family had died from eating poisonous olives in New York, was made in the United States Department of Agriculture from the blood of a sheep that had been immunized against bacillus botulinus poisoning. The serum was rushed to New York by the Bureau of Animal Industry on request from the United States Public Health Service. Three members of the Delbane family were alive when the request was made, but one of these died before the serum reached New York and another was so nearly dead that treatment was unavailing. The little girl was the only one with sufficient vitality left to make possible a test of the efficacy of the serum.

The Department of Agriculture happened to have the life-saving serum because of the fact that the bacillus botulinus is suspected of causing what is known as forage poisoning of horses. In investigating that subject, the scientists of the Bureau of Animal Industry made extensive experiments with serums. It was discovered that there are two strains of the bacillus botulinus. They look alike and the poisons they create produce the same effect, but immuniaztion against one does not afford immunization against the other. The two strains are commonly referred to around the bureau as "the olive strain" and "the cheese strain," or sometimes as "strain A" and "strain B."

The three recent instances of olive poisoning — one in Michigan, one in Ohio, and the third in Montana — were all caused by "the olive strain" or "strain A" of the bacillus botulinus. The veterinarians, therefore, were reasonably certain that the serum affording protection against the poison generated by "strain A" botulinus would be effective in the New York cases, and it proved to be so in the one case where it could be given a fair trial.

BAPTIST CHURCH MEETING

Likewise was the financial thanksgiving offering of $100 encouraging. Dr. William B. Wood of Haverhill was introduced by the pastor. He prefaced his address on "The Church of Tomorrow," by saying, "It is my great pleasure to be admitted to your genial fellowship; your lavish provision and large-heartedness became known to me in the dining-room."

He said in part, — "While the church was not able to prevent the war, that whirlwind of calamity, it survived the tempest and in the new world that is surely coming, I believe the church of the living God will take a more active part in the affairs of the world than ever before. The church of tomorrow will be a spiritual church, recognizing that its chief function is to represent God, that its supreme treasure is the Gospel which it is commissioned to proclaim.

"There has been a tremendous advance in giving. It is human to keep our own, but it is perfectly divine to give of our own to others. It will be a united church. All other teachers have failed and the slogan is 'Back to Christ.' When people draw near to Christ, they always draw near to each other. When believers are impelled to unite in prayer they are always drawn together in sympathy.

"We face today the mighty task of evangelizing the world by the preaching of Jesus. In this, a unified church is needed, — filled with the same sympathy and love, ministering to all needs of every-day people, proclaiming the whole Gospel to all. The chief business of the church is to get people ready to live, counting no labor, no sacrifice too great to advance the kingdom of God.

"I hope you will remember this, that, as the Lord God lives, the highest service any citizen can render in this particular crisis, looking to reconstruction, is to get himself in line with the church of Christ, and give all he has, in time, service, life, to help make it a true representative of Jesus."

Rising votes of thanks were given to the Social committee, and to Dr. Wood for their magnificent service.

The happy evening closed with the benediction by Dr. Wood.

Remember Your Liberty Loan Coupons

So many people have not cashed their Liberty Bond coupons due on October 15th — those on the Fourth Loan — that the Savings Division of the First Federal Reserve District has seen fit to remind them of the fact that not only is the coupon overdue but it is the last coupon on these bonds. The permanent Fourth Loan bonds will be ready about January 1, 1921.

With a view to encouraging bondholders to reinvest their interest where it will start compounding promptly, arrangements have been made for exchange direct of the coupons for War Savings or United States Treasury Savings Certificates. Each $100 bond yields $4.25 annual interest. The War Savings Stamps cost $4.21 in October and will be paid by the United States Treasury at full matured value, $5.00 on January 1, 1925.

In any event, the Savings Division says, holders of Fourth Loan Bonds should collect the money due on their coupons.

Too Particular

Bushby was sorely in need of an extra farm hand and advertised.

"What'll ye pay?" questioned an early applicant.

"I'll pay you what you're worth," promptly replied Bushby.

The applicant meditated thoughtfully for a moment, then turning on his heel, decisively announced:

"I'll be durned if I'll work for that!"

Revised Census Shows Gain in Anver's Population

According to word sent out from Washington the revised census shows the new total for Andover's population to be 8230 as against 7488 as was first announced.

Andover like many other towns and cities felt dissatisfied with the first returns and the opinion that the enumeration had not been thorough was confirmed by an investigation made by Town Clerk George A. Higgins.

G. Roderick Cannon was appointed to make a second canvass of what were thought to be neglected districts with the result that 742 persons were found who had been skipped in the first enumeration. The revised figures show a net gain over 1910 of 961 or nearly twelve per cent.

Memorial Exercises for McSwiney

Memorial exercises for the late Terence McSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork, Ireland, were held Sunday evening in St. Augustine's church. The exercises commenced immediately after the close of the men's mission. John A. Traynor, president of the Abraham Lincoln Branch, Friends of Irish Freedom presided. He introduced as the first speaker Rev. Fr. Thomas J. Fogarty, assistant pastor, who recently returned to this country after a visit to Ireland.

Rev. Fr. John A. Nugent, O. S. A., pastor of St. Augustine's church, made an eloquent appeal to the throngs who attended the exercises to give their moral support to the cause of Ireland. He was followed by Daniel T. O'Connell of Boston, former director of publicity bureau of the National Council of the Friends of Irish Freedom.

The meeting closed with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner."

Fine Old Andover

Again we must say "Fine old Andover." We do not know what the other towns and cities of the State did, but already a number of those who cast over ninety per cent of their vote are beginning to make up an honor roll, and certainly Andover has to take no back seat to any of them, when we realize that the vote cast here represented practically ninety-one per cent.

Of course the women were largely responsible for this, and again we must say "Fine old Andover," for we doubt if any community in the State has had its election carried on with less fuss and more success. We cannot pass over this phase of it without commending highly the efficient work that Miss Alice Jenkins has performed in the organization of the Republican women. And what of the wonderful work of classification of voters for effective use on election day done largely by Harry Sellars? If the voters only knew the care and labor which was entailed, that did so much to make sure a big vote in Andover, no words of praise would be excessive for that young man. Nor can we pass over the entire situation locally without also commending the efficient manner in which Town Clerk Higgins and the election officers who worked in conjunction with him carried on the details of the day's voting. Precinct 1 was wholly inadequate for the enormous demands made upon it, and of course before another election arrangements must be made to divide the town into more precincts than the two which now exist. Notwithstanding the overload, however, things went on as smoothly as one could wish, and although the lines were pretty long sometimes, and under adverse weather conditions would have led to considerable discomfort, we got through this year wonderfully well.

Congratulations to all who had a part in making the local machinery work so successfully!

The Great Victory

It is probable that the voters who made up the lists last Tuesday will never again see so overwhelming a victory for any political party, and certainly they will never see a result having so many interesting phases associated with it as that which is even yet not fully chronicled. The majority in popular vote that will finally be recorded, promises to reach into a goodly number of millions, while the electoral college will itself undoubtedly show a Republican lead of approximately three to one. There is little to be gained in analyzing the reasons for this tremendous overturn in politics. Post-mortems in connection with political doings are seldom profitable except where striking errors in judgment have seemed to control the situation, and even then they are of doubtful value. In the particular contest just closed they hold little promise that justifies giving them any attention.

There are some situations, however, associated with the contest that should not be entirely overlooked, as aids to the program that must be laid out for carrying on the government in the next four years. Those who knew anything of politics have never questioned for a moment the underlying purpose controlling President-elect Harding, and his associate Governor Coolidge. If they have at times discussed what the Democratic party persisted in making the national issue, in a way that was somewhat indefinite, the reason for such a procedure was fully appreciated and the action has never been questioned. It was a pretty difficult team of wild horses to which had been entrusted the Republican cause, and he who would successfully drive such a team would prove himself to be a skillful pilot. It must be acknowledged that Mr. Harding has acquitted himself with rare patience, superior ability in analyzing men and matters, and remarkable tact in handling the complicated questions that have come up during the nation's most complicated political campaign.

After March 4 he will face the most serious situation in the affairs of a great nation ever met with by any leader. The wild horses will continue to champ at the bits, and the course that many will want to follow will be different from that which wise leadership will insist the nation must lay down. The best advisers that the nation possesses must be collected around the new chief executive, and we have every reason to believe that this will be done, but back of those advisers and supporting the President and his close associate, there must be the dominating force of the American people themselves to constantly assist him in asserting the underlying doctrine upon which the past campaign has been fought, namely the assertion of American principles and the re-establishment of American government under the law and the constitution.

That was the real victory after all. Not a person in the United States believes that we can be independent of the rest of the world if he has any knowledge of conditions in the world, but first and foremost in asserting that position must ever be the destiny of the nation itself. When that fact was overlooked by President Wilson, then began his downfall. As that fact is ever held in view by President Wilson's successor, by that token will be measured his success.

Fortunate is the nation that among those men to be associated with the President is the great chief executive of Massachusetts. Peculiarly unfortunate is it that under the operation of public affairs in Washington the place which he will hold affords little opportunity under ordinary conditions for the play of the man himself to be very effective. These, however, are no ordinary conditions. A mind as keen as that of Calvin Coolidge, a purpose as high as his is, an ability to so clearly express as he can, and to interpret as he does the great underlying purposes of the American people, cannot be ignored, but must be fully used in the great emergency days ahead. May we all sincerely hope that, important as each cabinet officer will be, none will be more important because none could possibly have an equipment that makes for greater help, than the new Vice President.

Let no one think for a moment that the election of a Republican government at Washington solves the nation's problems. The cancer has already secured a vicious hold upon the body politic of the United States. There are elements fighting among themselves but united in their opposition to all that is best in American government, so deep-rooted already as to make it no easy task to enthrone the doctrine of law and order and organized government. Hardly less serious is the situation with regard to the business life of the nation. For four years the business of the country has been conducted in a feverish way. The chill that always accompanies the fever is upon business at the present time, with no uncertain effect. For nearly eight years an economic policy as unsound as could be imagined has contributed to this condition. It cannot be corrected in a day, or a month, or a year. It can never be corrected unless the American people realize the seriousness of the problem and co-operate in its solution. After all, the Government of the United States, to have its highest efficiency realized, must be a government by all the people of the United States, led by men who inspire confidence, who command loyalty, and who in turn receive confidence and loyalty.

Editorial Cinders

With no opposition of course there was no question about a very handsome vote for Dr. Abbott as Representative, but more than the size of the vote is the expression back of it. Andover has said without any reservations that it will trust implicitly in the good judgment and service that Representative Abbott is sure to render. The town knows the kind of service to expect because for so many years it has been under obligation to Dr. Abbott for so much work of a public and private nature, through which so many good things have been accomplished here in the town. The new Representative is to have as his recompense probably much more than many people would get out of a service in the Legislature. He has been a hard worker for many years and has tied himself so closely to his practice that in a way his opportunities at Boston will bring quite a bit of a vacation to him, and it is good to think that in honoring him the town is able to do it in a way that will bring much pleasure while the exactions of public service are sure to be met with great ability.

The women may not have had training in voting, but they certainly exhibited a rare intuition in the manner in which they analyzed the ballot, promptly marked their preferences, and certainly from a Republican standpoint contributed so much to last Tuesday's verdict. God bless the women!

Learned How to Use the Ballot

The last and most entertaining opportunity for the women of Andover to be instructed in their new duty of voting was at the South church vestry last Monday evening when Mrs. Barbour of North Reading, under the auspices of the Courteous Circle of King's Daughters, presented a farce showing the right method of using the ballot.

Those who took part in the presentation were: Mrs. Barbour, warden; Mrs. V. D. Harrington, Miss Mabel Marshall, inspectors; Mrs. John A. Jenkins, deputy; Mrs. Louis Huntress, policeman; Mrs. Herbert Chase and Mrs. Ethel Hitchcock, checkers; Mrs. Frank Cole, teller; Mrs. G. Roderick Cannon, Mrs. William H. Foster, Mrs. Homer Foster, Mrs. Stanley A. Pratt and Mrs. P. J. Look, voters; Mrs. Joseph H. Higginson and Mrs. Chester Abbott, ballot officers.

Engagement Announced

At a Hallowe'en party held last Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Ralph on Chapman avenue, the engagement of their daughter, Gladys, to Eldred W. Larkin of this town, was announced.

School Transportation Mounts

The regular monthly meeting of the Andover school board was held Monday evening in the board rooms in the Punchard school building, Dr. E. C. Conroy, chairman, presiding.

Routine business was transacted and the finance and advisory committee reported bills approved for payment, as follows:

General expenses	$ 459.80
Expenses of instruction	7054.83
Expenses of operation	529.03
Miscellaneous	136.58
Maintenance	57.23
Auxiliary agencies	332.08
Total	$8569.55

The board discussed the question of transportation, the cost of which is rising rapidly. Investigation of the problem in other places is being made and action was deferred until the results of the investigation are known. Transportation is now costing the town $224 per week, or over $8000 per annum.

The board placed itself on record as disapproving the purchase of expensive class rings and pins by pupils on account of the increased burden to parents.

It was voted to allow the teachers transportation expenses to Boston to attend the annual teachers' convention, to be held in Boston on Friday. All teachers must attend the convention.

Supt. Henry C. Sanborn reported that Miss Emily Carlton, principal of the West Center school was seriously ill. The board confirmed the appointment of R. Edgar Fisher as teacher of civics and history and that of Miss Barbara Lane as teacher in the commercial department of the Punchard School.

To Observe Girl Scout Week

The local patrol of Girl Scouts, Mrs. Bartlett H. Hayes, captain, will join with the Lawrence Council to which they belong, in observing Girl Scout week, November 6-15.

A pageant showing what the scout movement means and what the girls are being taught will be given on Saturday in Lawrence, in Methuen and possibly in Andover. The episodes in the pageant illustrate scout activities appropriate to each of the seven days of the week. Andover patrol, troop No. 1, takes part in the Thursday episode which illustrates doing a good turn.

The members of the patrol are Frances Flagg, leader; Ruth Hayes, Catherine Farlow, Marjorie Knowlton, Sylvia Vaughn, Susan Ripley, Elizabeth Eaton, Edda Benouf, Hazel and Sibyl Kidder.

Warren G. Harding, President-elect of the United States, thus indorses the Girl Scouts, whose campaign for membership will begin on Saturday and close November 15th:

"The triple aim of the Girl Scout movement: homemaking, health-getting and citizenship, is an ideal of womanhood to which I am delighted to give my entire approval and support.

"The woman of the future has tremendous opportunities before her. She will desire to prepare herself for them to reap full advantage.

"The Girl Scout movement with its comprehensive training in every branch of home-making, baby-care and home economics, in its study of the ideals and duties of citizenship, in the scientific upbuilding of the health of the girl through the Scout camp life, games and exercise, and in its well-rounded educational programme, is most valuable."

Sale and Supper

The Ladies' Aid Society of the West church held a most successful supper and sale Thursday evening. The vestry was prettily decorated with autumn foliage and bright berries. The apron table in charge of Mrs. Emma Wright and Mrs. Herbert Merrick was liberally patronized. Ice cream was sold in cones to a crowd of young and old by Mrs. Granville Cutler. The Lafalot Club dispensed sweets in another corner and Mrs. Winthrop Boutwell sold the pretty fancy articles that all like for holiday gifts.

A. R. Newton, Miss Bertha Pike and Mr. Foster helped make the time pass pleasantly with their music which everybody enjoyed and thus ended another successful evening.

One Pipe—The Modern way to Heat

THE MAGEE ONE-PIPE FURNACE is the new principle in heating to which the householder may confidently look for the realization of what he has always hoped for in his heater—"hoped for" but never "realized."

To-day this realization is made possible by the unique features presented in the Magee system. Through its single warm-air pipe, the Magee sends all of the warm air which is generated, upstairs into the house where it is needed. Coal bills do not look so large when you realize that all of the coal heat which you pay for is utilized; no part of it is wasted. Think it over and

OBITUARIES

MARY BRADFORD DWIGHT

Miss Mary Bradford Dwight, who died in Philadelphia on October 26th, was one of the few surviving members of the Andover Seminary circle of the past generation.

Miss Dwight was the sister-in-law of Professor Egbert C. Smyth, and came to live with Professor Smyth and her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth B. D. Smyth not long after the former took the chair of church history in the Seminary in 1863. She lived in Andover until 1917. She and her sister were the daughters of Rev. William T. Dwight, D.D., who was the pastor of the Third Congregational church of Portland, Me., and was a strong and eloquent preacher. Dr. Dwight was a son of Timothy Dwight, the first president of Yale bearing that name and one of the most eminent college presidents of his day. Mrs. Smyth and her sister were cousins of the second President Timothy Dwight.

Miss Dwight's friends would probably agree in attributing to her much of the untellectual vigor, depth of religious conviction and force of will characteristic of the family. She had an intense interest in the work and the fortunes of the Seminary, an interest to which the close relation existing between its teachers and its students gave excellent opportunity for expressing itself. To none of the houses on the hill did students more gladly resort than to Professor Smyth's and perhaps in no other did they find a family quite so devoted to theology and the study of theology. When the turn of events caused the Andover theology to take on a controversial character, Miss Dwight's sympathy with its defenders assumed an ardor which reminded one of New England controversy of earlier days.

Her devotion to what she held to be the cause of truth was fully shown in her assiduous service to the Andover Review.

After the death of both Professor Smyth and her sister in 1904, Miss Dwight lived in a retirement made necessary by invalidism, but her spirit was by no means shut in upon itself. She read widely and maintained a keen interest in public affairs, and events of local interest. She kept her connection with the November club of which she was a charter member. She eagerly followed the lives of her friends, especially those of them whom she had known as children.

She bore loneliness and invalidism with the utmost fortitude and received the attentions of her friends with touching gratitude. It was so to the end. Those who were with her through the last painful six weeks of her life say that her patience and thoughtfull ness for others triumphed over suffering.

BRUCE NESS DOBBIE

The funeral of Bruce Ness Dobbie, three-months-old son of Robert P. and Jessie P. Dobbie, who died Friday at the home of John Ness of Red Spring road where he had been nursed because of his mother's illness, was held Saturday afternoon from the family home at 6 Maple avenue.

The Rev. Frederick A. Wilson, pastor emeritus of the Free church conducted the service. Burial was in the family lot in Spring Grove Cemetery.

GUY HAMILTON SCULL

Guy Hamilton Scull, brother of Mrs. Bartlett H. Hayes of this town, died in New York last Friday after a short illness, aged forty-four years.

He was born in Boston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gideon Scull of Commonwealth avenue. Preparing for college at Hale school, he entered Harvard with the class of '98, where he was prominent right through to the hour when the war message came and he made his abrupt change from books to arms, volunteering for Roosevelt's Rough Riders. In college he rowed on his class crews and made several clubs, but showed a special proficiency in writing. Pencil and pad were his tools; journalism his trade; the whole wide world was his shop.

Anxious to reach Cuba and help end the war, he landed in Tampa, where the fever nearly caused his death.

Passing over a period of lesser experiences, Scull next appeared on the stage with the British soldiers who were trying to drive the stubborn Boers off the veldt in South Africa. At this time he acted as correspondent for the Boston Globe. In 1905 he was correspondent in Manchuria.

In 1908 the Harvard "Argonauts" launched their expeditions in search of sunken treasure on the Spanish Main. On the schooner yacht "Mayflower", the former defender of the America Cup, with Roger Derby, the old Harvard football player; Gordon Brown of Yale and Stephen Noyes and H. L. Corbett, both Harvard men, Scull sailed for the Silver Bay, Jamaica. The yacht ran into a hurricane and the adventurers narrowly escaped death.

He made his lassoing trip to Africa with Buffalo Jones in 1910. With pieces of ropes as weapons, these hunters captured the fiercest beasts of the jungle.

His appointment as Deputy Police Commissioner of New York city came in 1914 from Commissioner Arthur H. Woods. His next post of prominence was in the Intelligence Service in Washington in 1918, which won for him a commission as a major.

Maj. Scull married Miss Nancy Whitman Butler of New York in 1914.

The funeral was held in the Mt. Auburn cemetery chapel, Monday, the Rev. Francis L. Whittemore, pastor of St. Paul's church, Dedham, officiating.

The bearers were: Gen. Leonard Wood, who was lieutenant-colonel of the Rough Riders; Col. Arthur Woods of New York, former police commissioner in that city; Langdon P. Marvin, Sam-

Bazaar of All Nations

With more than a dozen active organizations working industriously for the Legion Bazaar, the public will be interested to see what is prepared for them at the Town hall on next Wednesday between the hours of three in the afternoon and ten in the evening.

There will be music and entertainment and all sorts of things for sale to eat, drink and to wear, to keep and to give away. It will be a wonderful opportunity to lay in a store of bread, cake and pies for the week-end to say nothing of stocking the preserve closet with all sorts of canned fruits and vegetables for the coming winter.

Each table will represent a different nation and the committees in charge are striving by their originality in costuming and in the selection of articles to be sold, to carry out that idea.

The list of the various tables with the chairmen in charge is as follows:

Japan West Church; chairman, Miss Marion Abbott. Tea.

Ireland. St. Augustine's church; chairman, Miss Margaret O'Sullivan. Lace and linen.

Scotland. Ladies' Auxiliary to Clan Johnston and Free church; chairman, Mrs. Robert Low. Bread and rolls.

Belgium. Ballardvale churches and Bradlee Mothers' club; chairman, Mrs. Juhlman. Aprons.

Canada. Andover Grange; chairman, Herbert Carter. Vegetables.

Iceland. Degree of Honor; chairman, Mrs. Taylor. Ice cream and tonics.

America. South church; chairman, Mrs. Fred G. Cheney. Preserves, jellies and canned goods.

England. Christ church; chairman, Mrs. Eben A. Baldwin. Flowers.

Italy. Baptist church; chairman, Mrs Albert W. Lowe. Macaroni and olive oil.

France. Indian Ridge Rebekah lodge; chairman, Mrs. James Walker. Mystery table.

America. Woman's Relief Corps: chairman, Mrs. Frank Valentine. Cakes and pies.

Greece. Pythian Sisters; chairman, Mrs. York. Candy.

Holland. Andover Mothers' Club chairman, Mrs. Charles Buchan. Cold meats.

Mothers' Club Meeting

The first regular meeting of the Andover Mothers' Club was held Wednesday afternoon with the Mrs. William B. Cheever, second vice president in the chair. The president, Mrs. Charles Buchan was unable to be present because of illness.

The revised by-laws were read by the secretary after which plans for the Mothers' Club table at the Legion Bazaar were discussed.

Tea was served by Mrs. Ralph Coleman, Mrs. B. F. Hatch, Mrs. Buchan and Mrs. Walter Buxton.

Woman's Relief Corps Notes

At the regular meeting of the Gen. William F. Bartlett Woman's Relief Corps, No. 127, to be held next Tuesday evening, Mrs. Lillie Tibbetts of Peabody will inspect the work of the corps.

Several members from Andover visited Needham corps last Tuesday evening when Mrs. Tibbetts was inspecting the work in that town.

Election Returns

The Town hall was well filled on Tuesday evening with men and women interested to know the first election returns. By special arrangements with the Western Union, a wire was run into the hall, and very prompt service resulted. The figures were thrown upon a screen, the lantern being operated by Edward W. Carlton.

Popular songs were sung under the direction of Fred G. Cheney. The accompanist was Fred Cronin who also played many piano selections during the evening.

The result of the vote in Andover was given about ten o'clock after which the audience diminished somewhat although many lingered till nearly midnight to learn the latest returns.

The committee, in charge from the Republican League was Harry A. S. Read, chairman and John C. Angus, chairman of the Republican Town Committee.

Election returns were also received at the Andover Club, Peabody House and K. of C. rooms, at all of which places open house was kept.

Guild Directors Make Appointments

Every member of the Board of Directors of the Andover Guild was present at the first meeting on Tuesday evening in the Guild Rooms. The good accomplished the past year under the direction of the efficient superintendent, Miss Fonnie Davis, and President Hamblin was very much appreciated.

The new president, W. Dudley Yates, appointed as Executive Committee, N. C. Hamblin, Philip Ripley, F. H. Boutwell and Mrs. Amy Trow. This committee was authorized by the directors to execute plans for finances and management of the work of the coming season which will commence December 1.

Miss Fonnie Davis will continue as superintendent and Miss Taylor, whose work as teacher of classes has been so well approved becomes assistant superintendent.

A. V. I. S. Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Andover Village Improvement Society will be held in the library of the Punchard school building on Monday evening, November 8, 1920 at 7.45 o'clock.

EMMA J. LINCOLN, Clerk.

Twenty-fifth Birthday Party

The old Abbott Homestead, with its atmosphere still redolent with memories of olden days, was a fitting setting for the company who gathered there on Thursday. It was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the birth of Phoebe Foxcroft Phillips Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution and the members, together with several honorary members, enjoyed the delicious luncheon which the hostess of "The House by the Side of the Road" had provided for them. The colors of the society, buff and blue, were everywhere in evidence. In the centre of the table was a silver vase filled with blooms of blue larkspur and yellow chrysanthemums, while little yellow gourds and bunches of grapes, half-hidden in autumn leaves, were grouped about its base. On the dishes of celery, at either end, were laid large purple pansies and at each plate was a little corsage bouquet of heartsease. The crowning feature of the banquet was a birthday cake, decorated in blue and silver and gold, which Mrs. Abbott with a most graceful little speech divided among the guests.

At the conclusion of the luncheon the following toasts were given, Mrs. C. E. Abbott, the Regent, acting as toastmistress:

Reminiscences, Mrs. Abbott; Birthday Toast, Miss Florence Parker; Homes and Customs of Old New England, Mrs. Geo. B. Frost; Lines from Rev. Varnum Lincoln's Poems, Miss Myra Bodwell; Old Time Flower Gardens, Mrs. Herbert Chase; Old and New Social Life, Mrs. V. D. Harrington; A Legend Song, Mrs. Homer Foster; Response, Mrs. J. H. Campion; As Others See Us, Mrs. William James; Our Responsibilities, Mrs. John Morrill.

Mrs. Abbott's "Reminiscences" was a brief history of the Chapter, given as was most fitting, by one of the charter members. It reviewed the work which had been done during the twenty-five years for the Town of Andover and its public schools. It was a splendid list — perhaps the two most noteworthy and doubtless the most lasting, being the marking of the graves of the Revolutionary soldiers and the formation of the Loyal League among the eighth-grade children. The latter work is now in its fourth year and is considered by the teachers to be most valuable in inspiring patriotism in the hearts of the school children. The competition for the medal is eagerly watched for each year and the winners greatly envied by their comrades. As a fitting conclusion to their silver anniversary the Chapter appropriated the sum of $25.00 toward the permanent memorial which it is expected will soon be under way for the men whom Andover sent to the Great War.

Soccer Notes

The State Cup and National Cup contests have interrupted the industrial soccer league for the last two weeks and prevented games on the Smith and Dove field. This is very unfortunate especially at this time when the season should be at its height and further with what is one of the best pitches in the state left unused.

Smith and Dove are now fourth in the league standing but with the team back at full strength and meeting the Arlington eleven, which the mill boys have already beaten, two more points should be annexed this week if the State Association will permit the game to be played.

The league standing at the present time places Abbot Worsted in first with a total of eight points. General Electric comes second with eight points having played one game more. Lynn Gas jumped into third position, having seven points to their credit. United Shoe and Smith and Dove are tied with six points, the latter holding the advantage, having played one game less. Amoskeag takes sixth position with four points, Arlington close at their heels with three points, leaving the Lynn Thistles occupying the position of "wooden spooners" with two points.

Many Potatoes Freeze During Shipping

Of 5,895 cars of potatoes inspected by agents of the Bureau of Markets, United States Department of Agriculture, during the year ended July 1, 1920, more than 2,000 cars showed damage from freezing in transit amounting in some cases to 40 per cent. This loss would not have occurred with the use of proper loading and heating methods, say the bureau's specialists..

Protection from cold depends largely upon a constant circulation of warm air around the load. Heated air from a stove in the center of a car rises to the top spreads along the ceiling between the potatoes and the roof, thence down through open spaces at the ends, then back underneath a false floor coming out at the stove.

Cars should be carefully lined with paper. In box cars, false floors, false side and end walls should be constructed of boards and studding so as to provide for air circulation around the load. In refrigerator cars, false floors should be provided and care should be taken that bunker bulkhead openings are not blocked, either in papering or loading.

Cars should be heated at least six hours before loading. In loading, sacks should not come closer than 8 inches from the ceiling. The potatoes at the floor should be loaded not less than 6 inches from the sides and ends of car.

Complete details regarding the prevention of freezing in transit and proper loading methods can be had upon application to the Bureau of Markets, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. Ask for Farmers' Bulletin 1091.

Beginning the 10th of November and continuing through the 19th, the National Grange will meet in Boston. November 10 to 13 inclusive, one of the biggest farm exhibits ever planned will be held in Mechanics Building. The seventh degree will be worked in full form Friday afternoon, the 12th. Interesting meetings are planned for every day and every granger should plan to attend some of the meetings.

The annual meeting of the Essex County Association of the N. E. M. P. A. will be held Tuesday, November 16 at 2 p.m. at the County Agricultural School, Hathorne. R. D. Lull, Manager of the Western Market District, will speak. In former years it has been the practice to send only regularly elected delegates from the local to the county meetings. This year, in view of the unusual questions before the association, it has seemed well to invite all members and all farmers interested, whether members or not, to attend this meeting in addition to the regular delegates.

A reward of ten dollars is offered by William Shaw for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the person guilty of this act. The last offense was evidently committed by someone who is in league with the liquor interests, as the poster destroyed was one urging all citizens to vote "no" on the "light-wine and beer" referendum.

LAWRENCE

Tuesday, November 5 — At the request of Charles P. Rushforth, a former jitney driver who says the Metropolitan Boston Motor Bus Company is ready to open transportation lines here at a five-cent fare rate, the city council voted to hold a public hearing in City hall on next Friday evening. A petition from Morris Klinor, another exjitney driver, seeking a franchise to operate a bus company here, was postponed for action at a hearing a week from next Monday. It is apparent from present indications that the street railway and especially the one-man cars, are due for a fine call at the meeting. Mr. Rushforth states that he will present men who will tell all about the busses and what they are capable of doing.——William F. Hodgetts, senior member of the former firm of Hodgetts and Crawford, which operated as fish merchants on Newbury street in years gone by, died Friday morning at his home, the Prospect House, Academy road, North Andover. He was in his 70th year. Death was the result of an illness which covered a period of years.——The mercentile committee of the Chamber of Commerce went on record Friday as being entirely opposed to the elimination of the street car in favor of the motorbus or jitney, and at a meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms it was voted to take active steps to oppose any plans for such a substitution.

Sugar Secrets

Sugar is one of the most talked of subjects of the present day, because it varies in price per pound — and rather remarkably too — from twelve and a half cents to $80, $120 — yes, even $375, — for the most "delicate and refined," the refinement being explained later in this article. While we always think of this commodity as a product of sugar-cane or beet tubers, it may come from palms, from maize, broom corn, Egyptian rice corn (these are sorghums), from bamboo, the maples, or be formed synthetically out of linen and other substances.

One peculiar feature about sugar is the grit or silica so prevalent in maple sugar and found to some extent in the best refined white variety — due to conversion of silicates from the rich dark soils in which the plant grows. For years this element has stood in the way of paper making, as there are tons of refuse sugar-cane in the south and of bamboo-shoots in Oriental countries, which it has been fondly hoped would replace pulp-wood; but experiment has shown that these "rocky specks" appear in the finished stock to such an extent that the pen is obstructed, and type-faces broken down in printing. Beware then, of any prospectus which seeks to interest you to invest cash in paper-mills using the sugar-cane fibres: undoubtedly it would be a fine proposition except for the silicates.

Molasses, the mother-liquor of the sugar when first taken from the cane and heated, has been the cause of many slight domestic tragedies, and sometimes of a great explosion. In the trade, one hears of "first, second, and third molasses" — two are quite rich in yield of brown sugar; third molasses is harsh and crude and comes very near to being rum.

Aside from food and water, the strongest and most primitive craving of mankind is for sweets. Why? It is simply explained: acid, tart, salt, smooth and bland, starch-like, gummy, pungent or aromatic foods affect one slight region of the mouth, throat or palate; but sugar gives a high degree of pleasure, first to the lips and tip of tongue, to saliva glands, which are stimulated; to roof of mouth, palate, throat, and even slightly to the gullet. This explains why sweet desserts are so agreeable after more or less flavorless meat and potato. It may shed light on why some full-grown people are fond of "lollies" and things like the papaw and persimmon, known to most of us as "children's fruit."

Sugars that cost three or four hundred dollars a pound might be classed as luxuries, but bacteriologists say they are necessities. An ounce lasts for some time, perhaps a year, in research by a skillful physician. Dulcitol, a delicate and fragrant sugar, one of the highest in price, costs greatly to refine, as the least impurity is likely to void the cholera-germ culture tests. Xylose is made from old corncobs, but the price is about eight dollars an ounce. Then come arabinose, levulose, raffinose — five or six dollars an ounce. Mannite is one of these sugars, extracted from scales of gum on the bark of the manna-tree of the Bible. Inulin is made from dahlia bulbs; chips of the "ivory-nut" (Ecuador) yield a delicious sugar.

All these sources to draw upon, yet sugar is expensive!

Being Honest with J. F.

No, no, Jayeff, far from it. We are past forty, and rid of all illusions. But we are deeply impressed with the advice that all writers should sign their stuff, and are doing this in a spirit of self-sacrifice, and to show our nerve.

Ye Olde Towne Mill, New London, Conn. This is said to be the oldest mill in America. It was built in 1650 for John Winthrop, who founded New London.

Every motor highway and byway through our picturesque New England and New York is a part of the long "Socony Trail".

MANY quaint sections of old New London are familiar to thousands of New England motorists. There is a main Socony depot there and many well-distributed filling stations to assure a dependable supply of gasoline and motor oils for all who need them.

The excellence of Socony products and Socony service is uniformly high. Unequalled experience in petroleum refining and progressive methods of distribution have made them possible.

Socony gasoline is always clean and powerful. Every drop of every gallon is the same whenever and wherever you buy it. It vaporizes quickly, ignites easily and burns completely in summer and winter alike. It is the standard of all motor fuels.

Use Socony products regularly. You will notice a favorable difference in the performance of your motor — more power, greater mileage.

Look for the red, white and blue Socony sign.

1901—Sept. 14 took the oath in Buffalo as the twenty-fifth president, aged forty-two.
1904—November, elected president.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT was the most popular of all our presidents. With the exception of Lincoln, his was the raciest, the most interesting character that we have had in the presidency.

Yet he was born apart from the multitude whom he led and he might have lived and died a stranger to the masses of his countrymen but for one thing: He had not the health to enjoy the life of ease which opened to him at his birth. Roosevelt had to fight for his very breath in his gasping, asthmatic childhood.

Finally he took a post-graduate course in physical culture in the wild West, where the "four-eyed tenderfoot" had to fight the battle of his youth all over again, in a strange world, with entirely different standards for measuring men.

Roosevelt cut his eye teeth in political leadership in the corrupt machine-run legislature of New York. He could not have chosen a more thorough school for instruction in the hidden, muddy springs of parties and politics. His experience at Albany put realism into his idealism and made the academic reformer over into the most intensely practical politician we have had in the presidency.

He decided at the outset to act in each office as if it was to be the last that he ever would get, and for nearly 15 years after he left the legislature, Roosevelt could not have been elected to anything in the boss-ridden state of New York. For a long time he was "shelved" on the civil service commission at Washington, until a reform mayor of New York appointed him on the four-headed police commission; but it was soon single-headed so far as the public could see, and that head was full of teeth for police grafters and lawbreakers. At thirty-eight the most he could ask of the Republican politicians, with any hope of getting it, was the assistant secretaryship of the navy. The entire administration sighed with relief when at last he went off to lead his Rough Riders.

In five months he was back from Cuba in the far more troublesome role of a popular hero. The New York machine was in such sore need of a good name to pull it through the pending election that it met him at the wharf and humbly laid at his feet the Republican nomination for governor. But in the governorship, he realized the worst fears of Boss Platt that he harbored, as the boss naively wrote him, "various altruistic ideas," and that he was "a little loose on the relations of capital and labor, on trusts and combinations and . . . the right of a man to run his own business in his own way."

The only thing to do with this wild engine was to turn the switch and shunt it on to the side track of the vice presidency. Roosevelt loudly protested that he wanted to be re-elected governor. And while Platt was trying to push him on to the national ticket, McKinley and Hanna just as earnestly tried to push him back on to Platt. The Republican national convention rose up and roared his nomination, flinging him, in spite of himself, upon the tide that led to fortune.

Five Minute Chats on Our Presidents

By JAMES MORGAN

(Copyright, 1920, by James Morgan.)

THE BIG STICK

1903—February 6, Roosevelt induced Great Britain and Germany to arbitrate with Venezuela. November, the Panama revolution.
1905—May 12, brought Russia and Japan to agree to discuss peace. August 29, the peace of Portsmouth.
1906—Roosevelt awarded the Nobel peace prize.
1918—January 6, death of Theodore Roosevelt, aged sixty.

AT the crackling of a twig in the still depths of the Adirondack mountains Roosevelt turned to see a guide coming out of the woods with the unexpected news that McKinley's condition was worse. Although he hastened to Buffalo, the president had died 13 hours before the vice president arrived.

At the outset of Roosevelt's administration a fearful citizen begged the rough rider not to permit his fighting spirit to plunge the country into an international war. "What!" the president exclaimed. "A war, and I cooped up here in the White House? Never!"

Many forgot the first half of the old motto that Roosevelt made his own. "Speak softly and carry a big stick." No man ever had a simpler faith in the efficacy of first "talking it over," man fashion, with an adversary, whether a senator or an ambassador.

The meddlesome German kaiser was the earliest to feel the "big stick" to see if it was only stuffed with straw. Germany and a Tory government of England were on the point of seizing territory as a security for some claims against Venezuelan citizens, when Roosevelt succeeded in dissuading England from such a step, but he failed to induce Germany to arbitrate the matter. Thereupon he told the German ambassador that unless the Berlin government consented to arbitration in ten days, he would send Admiral Dewey to stop the Germans from landing in Venezuela. The ambassador protesting that the kaiser could not back down now, Roosevelt replied that he was not arguing with him but was simply telling him what would happen.

After waiting a week without an answer from Berlin, he told the ambassador that he was going to cut the limit to nine days and that unless Germany agreed in 48 hours to arbitrate, Dewey would sail. In 36 hours the ambassador came back with a message announcing that Germany consented.

In good time, Roosevelt employed the influence of his unique position before the world to bring to an end the Russo-Japanese war. Shrewdly choosing the right moment to step in, he appealed to the two belligerents with a common sense and a simple directness that a friend would use in bringing together two quarreling neighbors. Afterward he steered the peace conference at Portsmouth against its will steadily toward a peace of reconciliation, an impatient Russian declaring that his "steel wrist" hammered out a treaty that neither of the powers wanted at that time and that "the terrible American president—Il Strenuoso—was capable of locking the conferees into a room and starving them into submission."

Instead of starting a war, the "big stick" stopped the only great war that broke out in the period of its sway.

While the Roosevelts were its tenants, the White House was an example and the center of the simple family life of America . . . "not a second-rate palace," the president said, "but the home of a self-respecting American citizen." A few months after graduating at Harvard, Roosevelt married Miss Alice Hathaway Lee of Boston, whom he had met in his college days. This bride of his youth passed from life as her daughter—Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth—entered it.

Nearly three years afterward he sailed from New York, directly following an unsuccessful campaign for mayor to marry a friend and neighbor of his childhood, Miss Edith Kermit Carow, who was sojourning in Europe.

ELECTION RESULTS

first votes, Mrs. Jenkins preceding Mr. Jenkins by less than a minute. From the hour of opening until noon there was a steady stream into the polling booth, the highest tide coming around ten o'clock when the line extended outside the front door of the Town hall onto the sidewalk and then turned and finished at Crowley's drug store. The line was always in motion however as the checkers worked rapidly and it was estimated that it took only about 25 minutes from the time of entering the end of the line to drop the ballot in the box. The weather in the morning was ideal for an election day, the air being crisp and bracing and those who were in line surely did not suffer any inconvenience from the weather man.

About one o'clock the rush was over and from that hour until closing time at six o'clock the demand for ballots, although steady, did not force the checkers to their limit in keeping up.

That the women came out in force is shown from the figures available. Out of a total registration of 1557 only 110 did not cast their first vote. Of the male vote 1786 were recorded in both precincts. Together there was in attendance about 90 per cent of the total enrollment.

The Republican vote was unusualy large while the Democratic vote was one of the smallest in the history of the town only 345 being cast for Cox and Roosevelt against 2708 for Harding and Coolidge.

Dr. Charles E. Abbott received the largest individual vote with a total of 2735, and that for Harding and Coolidge was next. On the Democratic side Daniel W. Mahoney, candidate for Senator led the ticket with 614 but was defeated by Frederick Butler, the present Senator.

Andover voted No on the beer referendum by a large majority; the vote being 1620 to 1123.

The End of the War

On the Bassans docks at Bordeaux, France, an old-time sergeant of a negro regiment was having trouble with a detail of men of his own race, who seemed inclined to loaf on their work of loading box cars with provisions for the Army of Occupation. Addressing one negro, who was especially lazy, he exclaimed:

"Come on, you. Git to work dar!"

"Shucks, sergeant," replied the lazy one, "Ah 'listed foh de wah, an' hit's over."

"Yo' all's a durn fool," the sergeant yelled. "Yo' listed foh de wah. Y-a-s-s! An' also foh de duration of de wah. Now, nigger, de wah hit's over, but de duration, hit's jes' done begun."—Judge.

Grenfell Class Reorganizes

The Grenfell class of the Free church was reorganized Sunday under the leadership of Rev. F. A. Wilson, pastor emeritus, and the following officers were elected: President, Wendell H. Kydd; vice president, Geoffrey Nicoll; secretary, Randolph Perry; treasurer, Stewart Fraser, Jr.

The Grenfell class was organized a number of years ago by Roy H. Bradford and conducted with remarkable success. Reorganization was necessary because more than thirty members enlisted for service in the World War, and many of the young men have gone elsewhere since their return from overseas.

Missionary Movies

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin H. Warner of New York have undertaken a novel method of enjoying life. With ample means for travel, they have visited the mission stations of Japan, China, India, Africa and other lands studying carefully the needs of the people and the progress of our missionaries in serving them. "Nature-chrome" photographs have been taken by the Warners with highly developed cameras purchased in Paris; and slides for stereopticon as well as movie-films have been made to illustrate their travels. They give their time and toil freely to aid other people to see as they do the wonderful uplift work that is being prosecuted in all parts of the world by the missionaries of the Christian faith.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Warner were among the entertainers at the Isles of Shoals last August and they have promised to visit Andover on Sunday, November 14th when they will tell some of their story at the South church.

Local Academy Honor Students

Among the honor students at Phillips Academy in the list posted are the following local boys:

Four Honors—Allan W. Buttrick, French, Latin, Greek Bible; B. C. Cutler, Algebra, French, English, English History; E. W. Carlton, Drawing, English 3 and English 4.

Free Church Notes

The Men's Discussion Class which meets at noon on Sunday will have for its subject, "Democracy in Church and State." The meetings are proving very interesting; they are quite informal, the discussion is frank and full, though not too long. Suggestions for subjects to be discussed are welcomed from any of the men present.

Real Estate Transfers

The following transfers were recorded in the local Registry of Deeds office during the past week:

Patrick J. Hannon to Lilla P. Renouf.

Kate P. Jenkins to Catherine S. Tyer.

John Desmarais, Jr., by mtgee to Margaret M. Gray.

John B. Warwick to American Woolen Company.

Michael Gardner to Daniel F. Murray, et al.

Baptist Church Notes

The Christian Endeavor society held a most enjoyable Hallowe'en social in the lecture room Monday evening. The North Andover society were the guests of the evening. A lively program of games and stunts was enjoyed by all, after which, conducted by spectres and ghosts the company went to the Junior S. S. room for refreshments. Weird tales and dim lights produced shivers and thrills. The evening was most successful.

Diet for Young Children

Some people tell us a great deal about what children ought not to eat, but forget to tell us what they ought to have. The kinds of food that children need to make them grow into healthy men and women are being studied by home economics experts in the United States Department of Agriculture.

The most important of these foods is milk. It supplies something for making muscles; something for making bones and teeth; and something that makes children grow. No child will grow as fast as he should or as well without milk. He may get fat, but fatness is not the same as strength. Unless he has milk, some part of him will almost surely be weak.

Every little child should have at least three glasses of whole milk every day, and if possible, four. If he has this amount of milk, and particularly if he can be given one egg yolk a day, he does not need meat. Some mothers worry because they can not afford to buy meat, fish, chicken, or other flesh foods for their children, but this is quite unnecessary if they are able to get milk, and milk is almost always cheaper than these other foods.

Some one will probably ask how the yolk of an egg should be served to a child. One good way is to add it to milk gravy. Another way is to cook it hard, salt and mash it and spread it on bread. The mother may just as well use the white of the egg for cake or for puddings. It is the yolk that the child needs most. All of the iron of the egg is in the yolk. There is something in the yolk, too, as there is in the milk, that makes children grow.

Every mother wants her children to have straight, strong legs. Both milk and eggs help to make the bones strong. Children who do not get these foods are almost sure to have a disease called "rickets." Their bones, being weak, bend under them and get very much out of shape.

Milk gets dirty easily and it is very hard to make it clean after it has become dirty. It is different from such foods as apples and oranges from which the dirt can be wiped. If milk is left uncovered and dust or other kinds of dirt fall on it, or if it is put into a dirty dish the dirt sinks to the bottom and it is impossible to get it out. Dirty milk is almost sure to make children sick, and so the greatest pains should be taken to keep it clean. The barn where the cow is kept should be clean; so, too, should be the pails and the milker's hands After the milk comes into the house it should be kept carefully covered in a cool place.

Whole milk is far better for children than skim milk, but clean skim milk is better than dirty whole milk. If the mother can not get clean whole milk she had better use clean skim milk and give the child a little extra butter to make up for the fat that was taken off when the milk was skimmed.

The "something" in milk that makes children grow comes from the grass and other green things that the cow eats. The same "something" in eggs comes from the green food that every good chicken raiser provides for his chickens. From the green food it gets into the milk and egg yolks. This substance, so much needed by all young animals, is also in lettuce, spinach, and other greens For this reason these vegetables are good for children, particularly when milk and eggs are scarce.

Some children do not like vegetables and it does little good to try to persuade them to eat them. A better way is to put them into soups or gravies without saying anything about it. For example, make milk stews or gravies and put into them any small amounts of cooked vegetables that may be left over or some fresh vegetables cooked for the purpose. With plenty of bread, a large bowl of it makes a good dinner for a child.

Any kind of cereal, oatmeal, corn meal, or cracked wheat can be used in place of the rice and molasses, or brown sugar can be used for sweetening and flavoring.

To say that a child does not need flesh foods like meat, chicken, and fish if he has plenty of milk does not mean that these foods are not good for him. The chief point is that they are not needed, and when used in addition to milk they are extravagant. So far as health is concerned some of the tenderer flesh foods, like fish or chicken, may be given in small amounts even to very young children. No child, however, should be given tough meat that is likely to be swallowed in large pieces. Fried meat is particularly harmful.

Fruit once a day is a good rule. If you can not afford fresh fruit, get dried fruits. Soak them well and cook them until soft. If the child is delicate give only the juice or pulp. Very young children who are just beginning to eat other things than milk should be given the juice only of the fruits. A little later they may be given the pulp. A healthy child of school age can eat apples, peaches, and plums, skin and all.

Every child should have plenty of good bread. There is no danger of his eating too much of it unless it is covered with sugar or jam. A hungry child will eat plain bread between meals without butter or sugar. Save the sweets for dessert.

Whole wheat or graham bread helps to prevent constipation. So, too, do vegetables and fruits. Mothers who can not afford vegetables and fruits should give coarse bread occasionally. Cereal mushes, like oatmeal, corn meal or cracked wheat, are good food for children; they have just as much nourishment in them as the ready-to-eat cereals and cost very much less. Hardness and crispness in food is not the same as toughness. In fact, hard bread or toast is good food for children. Bread that has been dried and slightly browned in the oven can be broken into small pieces and served with milk as cereal mushes are.

As to sweets, save them for dessert when the child is not hungry enough to eat too much of them.

Mrs. John Greenwood of Andover street is entertaining relatives from Barre.

John and Rita Shevlin are ill with chicken pox at their home on Center street.

Miss Mabel Herrick has returned to her home on Tewksbury street, after an absence of six months.

Mrs. Gertrude Williams of the Reading road spent Thursday with her sister Mrs. Elmer Conkey of Porter road.

The entertainment at the coming fair of the Ladies' Aid promises to be extremely good. Beside the play, "A Love of a Bonnet" there will be special singing by well-known people.

An alarm of fire caused great excitement in the village last Wednesday evening when an automobile backfireed and caused considerable damage to the machine. The accident occurred on Andover street near Frank Sherry's. The machine was owned by Mr. Moss of Methuen who had been visiting his brother who recently purchased the Scott house.

Ladies' Aid

The weekly meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held at the home of Miss Melissa McKeen on Thursday afternoon.

There was a good attendance and the members are finishing the sewing prior to the annual fair which will be held on November 16th.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Irving Shaw on High street, November 11th in the evening.

Mothers' Club Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Bradlee Mothers was held in the schoolhouse on Thursday afternoon. Regular business was carried on, and an interesting account of the recent convention in Boston was read by the secretary.

Current events were next in order and several snappy items were given by the committee; this is a new venture and seems to be taking very well. The chairman will be assisted next time, by Mrs. Shattuck and Mrs. S. Nichols.

Considerable sewing was accomplished and the mothers have several orders for quilts.

It was voted that Mrs. Fred Holland, Mrs. David Burns and Mrs. Lewis Schneider represent the club at the Bazaar of Nations, which is under the auspices of the American Legion and which will be held in the Town hall in Andover, November 10th.

Refreshments of tea, cake and cookies were served by the following committee: Mrs. Holmes Bates, Mrs. A. W. Curtis, Mrs. David Burns and Mrs. Elmer Conkey.

"The Old Peabody Pew"

"The Old Peabody Pew," a dramatization by Kate Douglas Wiggin of her own story with the same title, and produced by special arrangement with Samuel French of New York will be given in the Parish House of Christ Church, Tuesday evening, November twenty-third at eight o'clock. The play is, if possible, more witty and charming than the story and the characters so natural that they might have been some of our own Andover people.

The majority of those taking part are "Barnstormers," which statement is sufficient in itself. They include Mrs. Eben Baldwin, Mrs. Catherine Tyer, Mrs. Dudley Yates, Mrs. J. H. Kidder, Mrs. N. E. Bartlett, Mrs. Arthur Bliss and Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Stott.

The play will be given under the auspices of the Woman's Guild for their annual Thanksgiving entertainment.

Tickets may be had from Mrs. C. W. Henry and other members of the Guild and also from the Andover Bookstore.

South Church Notice

If any member of the South church parish has been overlooked by the solicitors for the Legion Bazaar, the chairman for that committee, Mrs. Fred G. Cheney would be glad to have them leave donations of canned goods at the Town hall, Wednesday morning, November 10.

Order Lime in Advance

Farmers probably will not be able to secure lime to meet their agricultural needs if they wait about ordering it until they are ready to apply it. Under old conditions, companies supplying agricultural lime recognized spring and late summer as the two periods of demand and farmers have ordinarily ordered their lime at the time they wished to apply it, in order to save time and work by including hauling from the railroad station and applying to the land in one operation. Under present conditions, says the United States Department of Agriculture, lime manufacturers are no longer able to adjust their business to this practice. Owing to shortage of labor in their own plants and transportation difficulties, last-minute deliveries can no longer be made with certainty.

For these reasons the Department of Agriculture urges that spring needs be anticipated and that orders for lime be placed at once. Dealers and manufacturers should have advance information as to farmers' needs so that orders can be combined and car space used to the best advantage. Delay in ordering may result in failure to obtain the lime until too late.

It is, moreover, the desire of the Railroad Administration that the season for delivery of lime, which has heretofore been from March to May, be extended to include the period from January to May, in order to relieve, as far as possible, the existing car shortage.

Twenty-six Hundred Telephone Patents Granted

"Experience has proved that every radically new, or really pioneer, invention, is invariably the forerunner and promotive impulse of a multitude of improvements and subsidiary inventions. The telephone has not been an exception to this. It is but little more than forty years since it was invented, yet within that period of time, or down to December 31, 1918, there have been granted twenty-six hundred and eighty United States patents for inventions in telephones (comprising transmitters, receivers, and amplifiers, etc.), and eleven thousand, three hundred and forty-eight more for switchboards, cables, signal apparatus, protectors and other telephonic appliances; a total of fourteen thousand and twenty-eight patented inventions, all directly traceable to the original and parent invention.

A WATCH

W watch is a mechanism to measure time. Time is our Life; do not waste it. Waltham Watch is the perfect mechanism to measure time.

TIME

The Stars give the astronomer accurate time. In the Washington Observatory correct time is obtained by observation of the stars. The passing of a star in mysterious accuracy over an established position gives us correct time. This accuracy is communicated by Wireless to the great factory of the Waltham Watch Co. The accuracy of the stars has been built into the Waltham Watch.

LIFE

Life is the Space of time we exist here on earth; the passing of a second is an infinitesimal space of our Life, yet time the invaluable possession quietly, surely and serenely passes away. If you value your Life do not waste your time, a Waltham Watch will help you to be on time. On Time — the great invaluable 20th Century watchword.

The Boston Globe of Oct. 26th printed following interesting record of the exceptional weather which we have enjoyed during October.

"Not a frost has been recorded by the Weather Bureau in Boston this month and the first twenty-five days of the month have been balmy and sunshiny. On only two days, the 12th and 23d, did the thermometer fail to reach 60 degrees.

"On an average, the daily temperature has been about seven degrees above normal and already an excess of 183 degress over normal has been piled up. The first week of the month was the coolest, leading many people to waste coal by starting fires which caused discomfort, as the weather warmed up for the weeks following. Leaves have gone from the trees, probably from the force of habit; overcoats have been a nuisance and straw hats would have been most welcome, if customary.

"The hottest day of the month so far was the 21st, when the mercury reached 82, but all last week was very warm. While this warm weather has been almost like spring in temperature it has been most un-springlike in its dryness.

"On the first day of the month, early in the morning, .70 of an inch of rain fell. Since that time there has been no measurable amount of precipitation on any day of the month. For twenty-five consecutive days there has not been occasion for an umbrella at any time."

A means of solving the problem of the H. C. L. was discovered by an old Austrian who has been begging food from door to door. Having imposed once too often on the charity of one of Andover's generous and tender-hearted spinsters with the plea of being "Ve'y hung'y" he was reported to the police and was arrested last Sunday morning at the corner of Pine and Summer streets. His pockets were said to be bulging with an amount of provender which would temporarily avert a famine.

The sight of the man escorted with all the pomp of the Andover police force to the home of the complainant for identification, gave rise to a story of robbery. Now the good woman is kept busy at the telephone assuring her solicitous friends that she has not been murdered or robbed and also gives them to understand that she is not the possessor of valuable jewels or even of a tempting sum of "raspberry money."

Householders on one street were the victims of Hallowe'en mischief when blueing was scattered on their granolithic walks and even on their houses. What fun there was in thus disfiguring property no one has yet been able to explain.

The usual bell-ringing was somewhat interfered with by the very general practice of keeping the outside light turned on. There isn't much fun in tip-toeing up to a doorbell in the full glare of an electric light.

The Townswoman's front-door bell rang violently one evening last week with that loud and unmistakable persistency which guarantees a boy at the other end of the wire. Suspecting a Hallowe'en joke, we cautiously approached the door from an unexpected angle and were surprised to find the small boy still there — a very small boy, too — who politely inquired if we would like to buy "The Literary Digest." The joke certainly was on us!

Mrs. Charlotte Morgan of Cedar Falls Iowa, writes us that she has received several answers to letters in response to the request printed in this column. She adds, "I am very much pleased with the Townsman and shall continue to subscribe for it as long as I live. The Townsman is delivered at my home every Tuesday and is read at once. I always find some items of personal interest that remind me of my days spent in old Andover." We are glad to have made another friend.

Among the recent gifts to the Andover Historical Society are two pairs of cephalines which as the librarian facetiously remarked, "are not any sort of musical instrument" but earlaps. They are beautifully made, one pair knitted and the other knotted from bright-colored worsteds with little cords and tassels to tie under the chin, all as perfect as when they came from Paris in 1837.

An advertisement of "Three Rooms to Let" in a recent issue of the Reading Chronicle brought thirth-six replies. Many of the applications came from neighboring towns and one from as far away as Malden.

Many persons are expressing the hope that the Legion Bazaar may become an annual event, as much a fixture in the Andover calendar as the May breakfast. Held near Armistice day it will be a fall festival when the people of the community as a whole may do something definite for the interests of the Legion even as they do at the May breakfast held in the spring for the benefit of the Grand Army of the Republic.

All the organizations who have assumed the charge of a table are pushing their work with enthusiasm. It has been said that no one can consider himself really popular who has not been solicited at least a half a dozen times. Certainly those who are not doing anything to help are distinctly out of it. We have heard of one women who has been solicited seventeen times. Is there anyone more popular?

Promising Markets Indicated for Growers of Wine Grapes

Grapes from the wine sections of California are likely to find a number of outlets never thought of while the making and selling of wine was permitted in the United States. Several such outlets were indicated by experiences during the vintage of 1919, according to specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture who recently visited the wine-grape regions. The problem however, is still a big one. Not only are uses and markets to be found for the product of 175,000 acres of wine vineyards but for the considerable portions of table and raisin varieties that formerly were made into brandy. The leading variety of raisin grape, the Alexandria, usually has a heavy second crop, which matures too late for drying, and this was formerly used in brandy making. Of the leading shipping grape, the Flame Tokay, only the best clusters are usually shipped for table purposes, and the inferior clusters were converted into brandy. Now other markets must be found for the culls of raisin and table grapes.

During the past season there was a very heavy demand at high prices for anything that could be called grapes. Only a few growers, therefore, attempted experiments in finding new uses, and those few experiments were incomplete, but they indicate probably satisfactory results when they are more fully tried.

At least 1,000 cars of fresh wine grapes were shipped into the Eastern States and made into so-called nonalcoholic wines and grape sirup. A large gallonage of unfermented juices was made, a large per cent being pasteurized and put up in 50-gallon barrels. Much of this has already been shipped east.

Considerable work was done in sun drying and dehydrating wine grapes, and the product found a ready market at prices much higher than those paid for raisins.

Important grape varieties that have been imported and tested by the United States Department of Agriculture have paved the way for some new features of the grape industry. Among them are a number of varieties of shipping and storage grapes that are considered superior in every way to the varieties heretofore grown in this country. Some of them ripen at the same time as varieties now grown, some earlier, and some later, thus offering the opportunity for greatly extending the grape marketing and consuming season. In addition, a much larger demand for table grapes can be created than has existed up to this time because the new varieties have superior eating qualities. One of these is annually imported from Europe in considerable quantities in late winter and sold at high prices. It thrives so well in California that it could be sold at prices considerably under those of the imported product and still net the grower a good profit.

The work of the Department of Agriculture has shown, also, how to fruit the Ohanez, the best keeping variety of all storage grapes. This should make it possible, with California-grown Ohanez packed in redwood sawdust, to supplant large importations of Ohanez and other Almerian grapes packed in cork dust.

The Department of Agriculture has also demonstrated that currant grapes can be grown in this country by grafting on resistant stocks and girdling the vines while they are in bloom. From 4,000 to 8,500 acres of these grapes would be needed to produce the 34,000,000 pounds of dried currants imported annually during the decade previous to the war. In some districts where raisin varieties are so late in ripening that they can not be dried, the currant varieties ripen early enough to be dried and put away before the first rains come. In districts where the raisin varieties succeed, currants, it appears probable, can be grown as an advance crop and cured and stored by the time the raisin grapes are ripe, thus furnishing a longer and more profitable period of employment for the labor that must be kept in raisin vineyards.

In the distinct dry wine districts where many of the vineyards are on phylloxera-resistant stocks, regrafting can be done with other varieties, if the vines are not grafted too near or below the ground. Where there are vineyard plantings of resistant stock they can be grafted to such varieties as are found most desirable.

Dentist: I think you'll have no trouble masticating now, sir.

Patient: I don't keer nothin' 'bout that, jest so I kin chaw all right.
